CONVEYORWARE CASE STUDIES

Problem: 3PL Management

Situation: A small family-owned fulfillment center started their business in their living room manually managing client orders and inventory. With the help of free software from a friend, they built their business up enough to manage a warehouse. “We worked in the warehouse during the day, and then spent all evening managing the paperwork”. Adding new clients became a problem because they couldn’t segregate client stock, manage charges for their labor, process back orders or receive orders electronically. They began to search high and low for affordable software that could manage all of the above, and more!

“other packages we were looking at started at thousands of dollars. Some companies wouldn’t even talk to us..., we are so excited we found Conveyorware...”

Linda - Flexible Fulfillment Services

Problem: Warehouse Inventory Management

Situation: The main challenge of a Michigan-based company that supplies new and refurbished wheels produced for multiple models and years of vehicles was to manage their core exchange program and sales of the refinished and newly coated rims. They had to maintain accurate inventory counts of products on the warehouse floor as well as through the refurbishing supply chain. They had an accounting software package and their inventory was being managed through a series of spreadsheets. What they needed was software that could handle it all!

“...from logistics and inventory reporting through accounting processes Conveyorware has provided excellent technical support for the interface and they constantly are upgrading it!”

Joe – U.S. Wheel Exchange

Problem: Accounting Integration

Situation: A new web store continuously added items until their product line included dozens of toys, electronics and other consumer products. Managing inventory, customers and orders through accounting and financial requirements without outgrowing their software programs was a constant concern for the owners.

“...we have not missed a single shipment, and we have been bringing in new business. ...your integrated inventory and accounting software has proven to be our greatest asset.”

John – Ferber Warehousing
